

Net Neutrality is the cornerstone of innovation, free speech and democracy on the Internet. Removing it will hamper business growth, social interaction, entertainment, and political discussion.

You're proposing removing something that France, Costa Rica, Greece, Spain, Finland, and Estonia have guaranteed their citizens as a basic human right.

Removing Net Neutrality rules is one more step into making America into a second world country and a further international laughing stock.

Removing Net Neutrality rules will not benefit the public in any way shape or form. The only beneficiaries of such deregulation are the Internet Service Providers. You do not work for the ISPs. You work for the public. I demand, beseech, and beg you to act in the interests of the American public and retain what little Net Neutrality rules we have in place.

-David Michaels